LOS ANGELES, Calif.-The city Los Angeles is having trouble cause of a forgotten Spanish king The city wants to build a 1,650 car garage beneath midtown Pershing square. But the Spanish king when he deeded the land to the village of Los Angeles specified it was for perpetual use as a spot for siestas and for nothing else. No one challenged its exclusive use as a park until 1906 when the city decided to build a library and office building there.

But property owner J. H. Spire dragged the Spanish monarc skeleton into court and spiked th move. His majesty had said noth ing about a library-office building on the block square park, Spire contended successfully. The matter rested until 1947 when voters passed a city charter amendment later approved by the state legislature which said the area under the square could be used for any suitable purpose that did not "breach the original conditions" or "decreased benefits and enjoyment to the public." But city attorney Bourke Jones said this attempt to undercut the king's commands might not stand up under a nuisance suit. "Fortunately, about the only persons who might object are tree lovers, and their case would be a shaky one. The subterranean parking lot would change the face of the park very littie."

TIME AND FAITH

The passing of a loved one is a very personal sorrow. We cannot undertake to make it less so. However, your friends and neighbors at Emergency Aid will do everything they can to ease the stress of sorrow. When the new Emergency Aid Funeral Home in Elba is completed, it will enable our staff, who have known you most of your life-to provide a peaceful and inspiring service. Who could be better equipped to help you than your friends and neighbors? They will be able to take care of all the necessary details and arrangements with the least trouble. At their disposal will be a modernly equipped funeral parlor that was built to serve Elba and Southern Alabama.

A good-sized chunk of ice cream on top of the pie will add still more luster to a perfect day. A most excellent and perfect day. A most excellent and perfect day. A most excellent and perfect day. Then he awoke to find himself in some kind of a room. It was completely dark, but a dim glow nearby indicated the presence of a stove. He was under a roof, in a building, but he could not understand why no one was near him. Where had he been left and why didn't somebody strike a light? He stirred gently, testing his stifened muscles and trying to de-cide whether it was worth the add-
